In this class, students will explore several different styles of puppetry. Students will have the opportunity to learn how to construct several different kinds of puppets and to use professionally designed puppets. Students will also learn how to puppeteer and use a monitor in the style of puppetry developed by Jim Henson for performance on film and television productions. Unlike traditional live performance puppetry, the puppeteers don't look at their puppets. They perform their characters up high above their heads, and watch their puppetry in a TV monitor. This enables the puppeteer to see if the puppet has good eye focus, lip sync, and is able to walk correctly into a frame and perform many tasks within that frame. In this class, students will have the opportunity to test their skills at puppet eye focus lip sync and movement. Students will take part in several exercises on camera and will get a DVD of their performances at the end of the semester.
